

Tamera Gregory ComForCare

As someone dedicated to serving her community, Tamera's friends and family would say that she finds joy in doing and caring for others.

The proud mother of three and new grandmother to Chloe (her new favorite), Tamera was born in Maryland where her mom was always volunteering -- taking her children to local nursing homes to sing and take homemade cards. Her mom taught her the importance of giving back, especially to veterans. Many years later, when taking ComForCare's "Joyful Memories" program to senior communities and veterans, Tamera often thought about what her mom would think about her new career path.

A stand-out moment was when, a few months into her new job, she took her son to an ALF on the 4th of July. Watching him smile and sing along to patriotic songs, life came full circle that day. Her mom would have been proud and so was Tamera! When she first started this journey, she told one of her four sisters that having spent 18 years in the travel industry and 15 years as a stay-at-home mom, she would have never seen herself where she was today. Her sister replied, "Oh, I think you are exactly where you are supposed to be."

That new career has taken her down a new path with new owners who share the same passion for giving back to the community. Just as she has done for the last nine years, she looks forward to continuing to help clients find joy in the journey.
