

Nancy Leve Video Journals Online

Nancy Leve grew up in the suburbs of Philadelphia. When she left the mountains of West Virginia after grad school and moved to The Big Apple, she realized she was definitely a big-city girl. She loved the energy, the hustle and bustle, walking and subway culture; of course, there's also Broadway.

A good job offer influenced her move to Atlanta. Her son was born there, but the family relocated to South Florida when he was eight months old. She expected to live in Miami for two or three years. Thirty-six years later, she still loves the South Florida winters and beautiful beaches. She expects this to be her permanent base because of her extended support system (although Barcelona wouldn't be a bad second option).

Nancy held marketing and marketing research management positions in corporate and non-profit businesses for 20+ years. She is a serial entrepreneur, having started five small businesses. Her current business, Video Journals Online, captures and preserves life story memories via a one or two-hour Zoom interview. The recorded video is edited. A person's unique life story, including lessons learned and wisdom gained, is an important legacy for loved ones and future generations. This service is available internationally.

Nancy also loves teaching and coaching current and future small business owners and entrepreneurs on how to be more successful when starting businesses or expanding for growth. She has worked in that capacity for the Florida Women's Business Center, Jim Moran Institute for Global Entrepreneurship, Broward SCORE, and other organizations.
