

Kathleen Asche Senior Care Authority

Senior Living and Care Solutions

Kathleen Asche learned how to help seniors and their families with difficult life-changing decisions by making those same decisions with, and for, her mom, for her own mother-in-law and for her uncle -- all while working a full-time job herself and living 1,200 miles away from her mom. She researched and visited countless senior and assisted living options.

Learning what questions to ask and what to look for, Kathleen matched what her mom needed and wanted with what a particular living situation offered. She learned how to communicate even more compassionately with her own mom, a woman whose independence and joy in life were inspiring to many, over many years, but who then had to rely on help from others and did not want to move from her home, away from her friends.

When Kathleen moved to Florida two years ago, she knew she wanted to use what she'd learned to help other seniors like her mom, and to help other daughters, sons and relatives who were trying to help their loved ones.

Kathleen's natural caring served her well in her career choices. She worked as a flight attendant over many years, soothing peoples' fear of flying and helping passengers evacuate during two plane crashes, lead the teams at Logistics Health Incorporated assess the health of 1,000's of our military heroes, and worked with Catholic Health Services.

Now working with Senior Care Authority, Kathleen continues to help seniors and their families make difficult life-changing decisions.
