

Misha Dudani

Better Healthcare LLC

In early 2020, I came to the U.S. from Mumbai, expecting a short visit. But life had other plans — marriage and the global pandemic turned that visit into a permanent move, and a new chapter began.

I was raised in a progressive, entrepreneurial family that valued independence and hard work. I started working at 16, launched my own fashion accessories brand, and later earned a Master's in HR Management from the University of Sheffield. Still, when I joined Better Healthcare LLC, I had no experience in healthcare.

What I did have was curiosity, empathy, and the drive to learn. I quickly realized how much I connected with the industry's core values — compassion, care, and human connection. Just three months in, I asked for more responsibility. A year later, I became Assistant Director of Operations. Today, I'm proud to be a co-owner of the company with Jennifer and Jason — something I never imagined when I started. I'm especially grateful to Jay, my mentor and boss, who believed in me from day one.

Working in home healthcare changed me. Coming from a culture where elders are always surrounded by family, it was eye-opening to see how isolated many seniors are here. It gave me a new sense of purpose and a deeper appreciation for the work we do.

This journey has been one of growth, resilience, and rediscovery. I've learned that true leadership is rooted in compassion — and that's where I've found my place.
